NOLA: SCOU 000101
Series Title: Supreme Court; The
Episode Title: One Nation Under Law
Version: SD-Base
Length: 60
Airdate: 1/31/2007 8:00:00 PM/502
Service: PBS
Format:

One Nation Under Law examines the creation of the court and follows it through the brink of the Civil War, paying particular attention to the fourth chief justice of the Supreme Court - John Marshall - and to his successor, Roger Taney. Marshall presided over one of the most famous cases before the court while Taney presided over one of the most infamous. In Marbury v. Madison (1803), Marshall found in an obscure case involving an unsigned judicial appointment the opportunity to assert the court's most important power: judicial review, which gave federal courts the right to strike down laws that clashed with the Constitution. In Dred Scott v. Sandford (1857), however, Taney, the next chief justice, exercised that same power against the national government - to protect slavery.

"New Orleans was the birthplace of jazz," George Buck asserts. "Other places in the South they didn't allow the slaves to play drums because they were afraid that they might send messages, you see, for a revolt. In New Orleans, just like it is today, everything goes. You have dances, you have Congo Square where everything started." George H. Buck, Jr. runs a non-profit association that maintains a collection of early jazz recordings. Listen to five tunes from the early days of jazz and read one New Orleanian's thoughts on the origins of jazz. His love of music and his love of his hometown shine through.

Version: SD-Base
Length: 60
Airdate: 2/20/2007 12:00:00 MID/502
Service: PBS
Format:

Filmmaker Byron Hurt, a life-long hip-hop fan, was watching rap music videos on BET when he realized that each video was nearly identical. Guys in fancy cars threw money at the camera while scantily clad women danced in the background. As he discovered how stereotypical rap videos had become, Hurt, a former college quarterback turned activist, decided to make a film about the gender politics of hip-hop, the music and the culture that he grew up with. "The more I grew and the more I learned about sexism and violence and homophobia, the more those lyrics became unacceptable to me," he says. "And I began to become more conflicted about the music that I loved." The result is HIP-HOP: Beyond Beats and Rhymes, a riveting documentary that tackles issues of masculinity, sexism, violence and homophobia in today's hip-hop culture.

Are U.S. farm subsidies causing global starvation? There are roughly 30,000 cotton growers in America who receive billions of our U.S. tax dollars every year through government subsidies. But critics charge this generous financial support may be ruining the livelihoods of millions of cotton growers in the poorest parts of the world. NOW looks at the tragic global consequences of our subsidies, and at a new farm proposal -- supported by the president -- which seeks to rein in the assistance. Are we paying a terrible global price for subsidizing U.S. cotton farmers?

Service: PBS
Format:

FRONTLINE goes inside a terror cell accused of planning mayhem and mass murder in Atlanta and Toronto in summer 2006. Self-proclaimed Muslim fundamentalist Mubin Shaikh, who spent two years inside the cell as a police informant, tells FRONTLINE about the cell's plots and politics. Intelligence agencies consider the cell to be the most serious homegrown cell discovered so far in North America. Like a clone of cells that have grown all over Europe, the cell attracts clusters of young men, often of immigrant parents, living in the suburbs, who reject their parents' culture and modern consumerism to become a "Jihad generation." In a co-production with the CBC's The Fifth Estate, FRONTLINE follows these radical Islamists from Atlanta and Toronto to the training grounds of Pakistan.

This documentary attempts to explain the disturbing yet fascinating modern evolution of what some have dubbed "the oldest hatred of the human race." Sixty years after the Holocaust, anti-Semitism is routinely condemned by governments, individuals and the media, but it still persists, manifesting itself on an almost daily basis in regions all over the world. And it's escalating. This documentary explores ways to close the schism between Jews and Christians, Jews and Muslims and all majority-minority relations.

Can an Afghan woman, armed with only a strong voice and a fierce loyalty to her homeland, overcome entrenched views and death threats to help bring democracy to Afghanistan? David Brancaccio talks with Danish filmmaker Eva Mulvad about her documentary "Enemies of Happiness." The film follows the outspoken and successful campaign of Malalai Joya, a 28 year-old Afghan woman running in the country's first democratic parliamentary elections in 35 years. The elections represented a special milestone for Afghan women, who had endured second-class citizenry their entire lives. During the campaign, Joya's life was threatened multiple times because of her vocal and fearless opposition to the presence of warlords in the nation's government. But Joya's dedication also inspired many Afghans to join her in the cause of real reform. "Enemies of Happiness" won the World Cinema Jury Prize in Documentaries at the 2006 Sundance Film Festival.

Sisters of Selma

This program is an unabashedly spiritual take on the Selma, Alabama, voting rights marches of 1965 from some of its unsung foot soldiers - Catholic nuns. Following the violence of Bloody Sunday," sisters from around the country answered Dr. Martin Luther King's call to join the protests in Selma. Never before in American history had avowed Catholic women made so public a political statement. Risking personal safety to bring change, the sisters found themselves being changed in turn - and they tell viewers how. Selma blacks testify about the importance of Catholic clergy in their lives, and explain why it took until the year 2000 for them to become fully enfranchised. Newfound dramatic archival footage carries much of the story. In 2003, director Jayasri Hart reunited the nuns to let them view themselves and the protests on tape for the first time. Their recorded reactions help narrate the film. Other Selmians, Catholic and Protestant, white and black, give their views on the nuns' contributions to history. "

The Quiltmakers of Gee's Bend

For more than 150 years, the women of Gee's Bend, Alabama, have made quilts reflecting their history and daily lives. Over generations, they worked in isolation, continuing to inhabit the remote plantation land their parents once slaved. Today, art critics worldwide compare them to the great creative enclaves of the Italian Renaissance.
